One Man Hurt in Explosion

This morning about 10 o'clock one of the small buildings used for loading primers at the Hercules Powder Company plant at Port Ewen, blew up with a terrific report. There was one man at work in the building at the time of the explosion, but fortunately he escaped with some slight cuts about the head. The company has equipped the buildings with steel shields behind which the men stand while at work and which prevent them from being seriously injured when an explosion occurs.

The explosion was of such force that the building was completely demolished. Dr. A. A. Stern of this city was notified and attended the injured man, whose name was not learned.

Inquiry by telephone at the office of the company brought the assertion that no one had been hurt and that there had been no explosion.

MAGGIE VAN WAGONER.
Treasurer of The Industrial Home.

Annual Report of the President.
We begin our report with a look toward the past.

Forty-seven years have come and gone since the organization of the Industrial Home as a board of managers and trustees on December 26, 1876. In March following, a building was rented and the home was ready to begin the work of caring for homeless children. This building, no longer in existence, stood on Maiden Lane, opposite Academy Park. From this building the home was transferred to a hired house at 87 Green street. After a few years the home purchased a house at No. 333 Broadway, and finally the present Industrial Home was built with money raised by Miss Mary Isabella Forsyth and her associates, and was publicly opened September 27, 1903, free from debt.

It is our desire to measure up to the example set us by these earlier workers in their faith as to the sure success of their undertaking and in their persistent efforts in the face of many discouragements.

During the past year the health of the children has been uniformly good. The report of the medical staff is as follows:

Operations for tonsils and adenoids: 2
Fractured collarbone, 1
Fractured foot, 1
Pertussis, 5
Chickpox, 5
Eyeslasses furnished, 1
Extracting teeth, 17
Filling teeth, 78
Schick test, 17
Toxin and toxin, 17
Doctors' visits to home, 77

Much credit is due Dr. Mambert and his able corps of assistants for giving so much of their valuable time and service in caring for the little ones.

Jan. 1, 1923, children in home, 42
Children received during 1923, 17
Children returned to relatives, 11
Children returned to committing officer, 6
Children sent to private homes, 2

Jan. 1, 1924, children in home, 37
It is with deep regret that we announce the withdrawal of Wesley D. Hale from the board of trustees, of which he has been a member for many years. His retirement is due to ill health, which makes it impossible for him to continue longer on the board. The vacancy thus created has been filled by the election of John T. Washburn.

Mrs. C. M. Preston, who has served the home most faithfully as first vice president of the board of managers, found it necessary to tender her resignation as manager. This was gratefully accepted, and the vacancy was filled by the election of Mrs. Frederick W. Warren. Mrs. William H. Van Etten has also been added to the board of managers.

The year just closed has been one of special blessing. Earlier in the year there was a somewhat discouraging financial condition. There has been for some time a shrinkage in the number of yearly subscribers, due mostly to death and removals from the city, and the managers were confronted with a number of unpaid bills and a nearly depleted treasury. We do not have any drives or tag days, but we depend upon those who know of our work to see that we have the funds which to carry it on. That our friends did not fail us is evident from the balance reported by our treasurer.

We are most grateful for all assistance in the affairs of the home; for legal advice, for entertainment for the children, for sewing done by friends, for gifts of money, food and clothing. We feel that the generosity of the people of our county and city has not lessened, in spite of the many calls for aid in other directions.

New Proposal for Hotel Here

Chamber of Commerce Directors Authorize Free Survey by Hockenbury System After Bobo Has Explained Plan—Now Operate Many Big Hotels.

A new hotel proposition was put before the Chamber of Commerce directors Tuesday night by Stephen N. Bobo, vice president of the American Hotels Corporation, as a result of which the directors decided to have a survey made of the city by the Hockenbury system, the survey itself being without cost to the Chamber or the city.

The American Hotels Corporation is a subsidiary of the United Hotels Corporation. The American Hotels Corporation was organized about a year and a half ago and both corporations were organized to build and operate chains of hotels, the United Corporation taking over hotels which have over five hundred rooms and the American Corporation operating hotels whose room capacity is less than that number. The United Corporation now has eighteen hotels under ownership or contract, five of which are in course of construction. The American Corporation has seventeen hotels under contract, some of which are still under construction and others are in course of development.

According to statements of Vice President Bobo, of the American Hotels Corporation, Kingston was on the original list of the United Hotels Corporation at the time of its organization as a link in the chain hotel system owned or operated by the parent company or its subsidiary, reaching from Michigan through various central and eastern states into Massachusetts. Construction work on all new hotels in which the United Hotels Corporation has an ownership interest has been performed by the J. G. White Corporation, which is among the largest engineering and building concerns in New York.

Among the hotels operated by the United Hotels Corporation is the Ten Eyck at Albany. Other hotels operated by the United or its subsidiary include the Onondaga at Syracuse, the Rochester at Rochester, the Ben Franklin at Philadelphia, the Roosevelt at New York City, the Pontiac at Oswego, N. Y.; the Mount Royal at Montreal, Canada; the Penn-Cliff at Harrisburg, Pa.; the Clifton at Niagara Falls, Ontario, which was recently acquired; and also hotels at Ottawa, Canada, York, Pa.; Flint, Mich.; Worcester, Mass., and many other cities.

Operation of any hotel taken over by either the United Corporation or the American Corporation is for a period of thirty years under the contract which the corporations enters into. The United, or parent, Corporation, owns all of the stock in the American Corporation, and both corporations have the same officers. The United Corporation was organized in the belief that hotels, like chain stores or any other industry, can be profitably operated under competent management, because experience shows that properly operated hotels do pay.

Three elements entering into the success of a hotel, said Mr. Bobo, were proper location, proper design and a hotel in keeping with the community. Proper location meant a location where the greatest number of people pass the doors—not necessarily pedestrians; traffic may mean automobile traffic. This does not mean established traffic necessarily, because a hotel built ten or fifteen miles from a center of population, without a house in sight, often would become a dead end.

Known on account of the service it furnished and within a short time would become itself the incentive and center for a new neighborhood.

Proper designed hotels meant hotels which were designed for economical operation with a minimum number of employees who could render a maximum of service. Waste space might be beautiful to look at, but it did not pay. In one hotel which had been taken over by the United Hotels Corporation, the waste space had amounted to forty per cent of the entire hotel space.

This waste space consisted of numerous card rooms, tea rooms, breakfast rooms, etc., and seven kitchens. The hotel had been remodelled so as to eliminate all except one large dining room; the other rooms had been turned to useful and paying accounts; a deficit had been wiped out covering a period of three years of operation, and the hotel was now ready to pay dividends.

The year just closed has been one of special blessing. Earlier in the year there was a somewhat discouraging financial condition. There has been for some time a shrinkage in the number of yearly subscribers, due mostly to death and removals from the city, and the managers were confronted with a number of unpaid bills and a nearly depleted treasury. We do not have any drives or tag days, but we depend upon those who know of our work to see that we have the funds which to carry it on. Wilson Gets Simplest Burial Ever Accorded Great American; At Last Finds "Way To Peace"

Nation Gives Self Over To Mourning During Time of Funeral—Reverent Crowds Stand Silently By.

By Telegraph to The Freeman.

Washington, Feb. 6.—On the heights of Mount St. Alban, commanding the scenes of his greatest triumphs and his profoundest tragedies, reverent hands laid to rest today Woodrow Wilson, America's greatest war president, whose spoken word once decided the fate of empires and changed the history of a turbulent world.

Within sight of his final resting place towers the monument that a grateful nation erected to Washington, the founder; the jewel-like memorial to Lincoln, the emancipator; and further on the modest little tomb that marks the eternal sleep of the unknown soldier—a trinity of memories that shall be forever hallowed in America.

For Woodrow Wilson there was no last sad march down historic Pennsylvania avenue, no clattering military bands, no muffled drums and dirgeful songs, no pomp of power and of display, no pageantry of a nation's sorrow. In life he had participated in more of those memorable marches down the avenue than ordinarily falls to the lot of presidents, and in death he sought only the peace and quietude that comes when tired men fall asleep.

There was not even an eulogy of him at his bier. He had not wished it. In life he was authorized and criticized as he had been but few of his predecessors, and, in death, it was his wish that the eulogies paid him on this final day be spoken only softly in the hearts of his countrymen.

In life he had been peace he sought—he put five million men under arms and sent them into war seeking it—and in death at last he found it.

The last earthly door through which his war worn body was borne this afternoon was marked: "The Way to Peace." The words were chiseled in cold stone—a reminder that death brings sometimes what life had refused. The little chapel wherein his spirit was assigned to Time's keeping was appropriately Bethlehem Chapel. On its walls and windows were depicted the life story of the Prince of Peace, all mankind's long struggle for attainment.

Never has a great American been buried so simply. Present there afternoon were only those his family wished. There was none of that mad scrambling and undignified hustling for points of vantage that have marred solemn occasions in the past. There were friends of a lifetime there, his college classmates, his children, his intimates, without regard to rank or station in life, those who had served him well in however humble the capacity and finally there were the president of the United States and elected few of the government over which he so long presided. The presence of these latter was the only reminder at the tomb itself of the high place Woodrow Wilson held.

But not even the wishes of the dead could quite remove from the final scenes the evidences that an event momentous in the world's history was being written down.

Outside the great, half finished cathedral which is to be his final resting place stood thousands of people—come voluntarily to stand and shift restlessly in the sharp cold and demonstrate that no ordinary mortal was here being buried.

To these thousands outside came clearly the simple Scriptural quotations and prayers which constituted the final services. The words were wafted out of the little chapel by far off were caught up and broadcast to countless others. The whole world listened as Woodrow Wilson went to his final resting place and yet his presence was unfeeling in the dimly lit chapel.

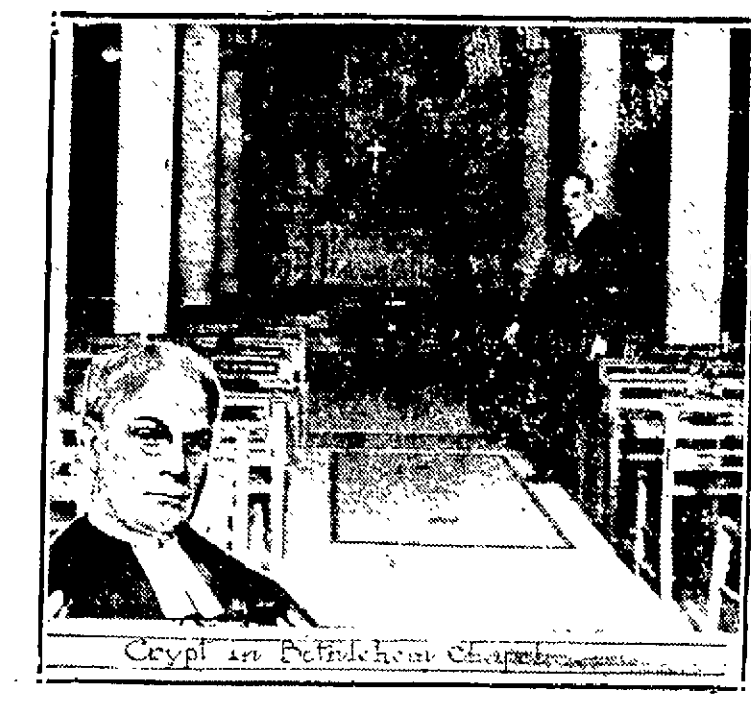

Three miles from the Cathedral, the wheels of government, slowed down since Sunday, stopped altogether. And even the business and commerce of a great city ceased as the casket was lowered to its resting place. Street cars halted in mid-block, taxi-cabs and automobiles ground to a stop and clerks suspended at 3:30 as the chimes of St. Paul's any pealed forth their sorrowful message that Woodrow Wilson was being lowered to his grave.

The only reminder in the chapel of the world wide sorrow at his passing and of the regard in which he was held, was the myriad mass of flowers. They made the air heavy with their fragrance.

The wreaths of kings were there, the offerings of rulers everywhere, and mixed indiscriminately with them were the solitary blossoms and the simple sprays that expressed the reverence of mothers and little children.

The simple services began in the library of the home of S street, where the former president spent most of his waking hours since his retirement from the White House three years ago.

WHERE WOODROW WILSON WILL REST FIVE YEARS.

The minister of the Bethlehem Chapel, in the uncompleted Washington National Cathedral, is shown standing before the altar at the crypt in which the mortal remains of Woodrow Wilson will remain for five years. It is likely that when the cathedral is completed the body will be transferred to the crypt of the Chapel of the Resurrection at the crossing of the cathedral beneath the imposing tower. Rev. Sylvester Beach, of Princeton, N. J., former pastor of the Wilson family, officiated in part at the funeral services.

In its small confines were gathered only members of the immediate family, led by Mrs. Wilson and her daughters; the President and Mrs. Coolidge, Chief Justice and Mrs. Taft and 150 honorary pall bearers, and drawn from among the closest intimates of the former president.

There beside the black casket, decorated only with the American flag made of red, white and blue flowers, the still air of the room was broken at 3 o'clock by the voice of the Rev. James H. Taylor, pastor of the Central Presbyterian Church, intoning the 23rd Psalm:

"The Lord is my Shepherd, I shall not want.
"He maketh me to lie down in green pastures; He leadeth me beside the still waters."
Then a prayer by the Rev. Sylvester Beach. He had been the Wilson's pastor for many years at Princeton. He officiated at the burial of the first Mrs. Wilson ten years ago. He married the McAdoo.

There followed scriptural readings by Bishop James A. Freeman, an old time friend. He read from Deut. 33-27 and Jude 24-25:

"The eternal God is thy refuge, and underneath are the everlasting arms; and He shall thrust out the enemy from before thee, and shall say destroy them."
"Now unto Him that is able to keep you from falling, and to present you faultless before the presence of His glory with exceeding joy."
"To the only wise God our Saviour be glory and majesty dominion and power, both now and ever—amen."

There was a rustle among the sorrowing group, and then came a group of service men, their breasts glittering with the medals won in the same war that shattered the man before them. Eight soldiers, eight sailors and eight marines. Tenderly they hoisted the heavy burden of their comrade to their stalwart shoulders, and, with measured step, carried the casket out of the library and down the broad central staircase to the black private hearse waiting below.

The restless murmur of the great crowd that packed the sidewalk opposite the red brick house was still as their burden was still gently into the hearse. Here and there a woman could be heard sobbing. Handkerchiefs were everywhere and men unwept.

Motors purred up to the door and the black cloaked widow and members of the family disappeared into them.

Silently then the short journey to the Cathedral was begun. Through S street the sorrowful procession passed, and thence into broad expanse of Massachusetts avenue to the entrance of the Cathedral grounds. Both sides of the avenue were thronged with people—men bare headed, women with handkerchiefs to their eyes and here and there a child throwing flowers into the street.

Two companies of soldiers and two of marines reinforced the regular police in keeping the route open and free of the multitude.

The ride from the house to the Cathedral was of brief duration. There, a way had been cleared for the sorrowful procession. The black hearse drew swiftly up to the door, the service men again took up their burden, and preceded by Bishop Freeman and followed by those who had come from the house they passed through the doorway marked "The Way to Peace" and down the broad central aisle of the little chapel.

There was a sudden hush over the six hundred people gathered there as Bishop Freeman began reading: "I am the Resurrection and the Life, saith the Lord; He that believeth in Me, though he were dead, yet shall he live, and whosoever liveth and believeth in Me, shall never die."

"We brought nothing into this world, and it is certain we can carry which he had rendered such notable service.

The peace that was denied to Woodrow Wilson in his turbulent life came to him today in death. Peace is carved in the stone over the doorway to the little chapel where final services will be held for him late this afternoon; the message of peace is portrayed in story and picture in the wood and stone of the chapel; and peace will be further symbolized by the unarmed service men who carry him to his crypt.

While the crowds of reverent mourners gathered this morning in the little hilly street outside his modest home, the body of the former president was removed from the bed on which he died and borne to the small library where he spent most of his waking hours since his retirement from the White House.

In this library, whose walls are fastened with mementoes of his greatness, there will be held this afternoon the briefest and simplest of services. They will consume scarcely more than a few minutes. A Psalm, a prayer and the reading of some extracts from a devotional book which he was wont to read daily—and that is all.

Then his body will be borne down the long stairway and into a hearse for the short trip to the heights of Mount St. Alban, where there will be another and similarly brief service.

Only the immediate family, a few old time friends, and the president of the United States will be present at the services at the house. At the Cathedral services there will be others—representatives of the various arms of the government over which he so long presided, but even there only a comparative few of the hosts that mourn for Woodrow Wilson.

Outside the Cathedral, however, there will be thousands gathered to pay their last respects to Mr. Wilson. To these will be brought the prayers and the scriptural readings within by radio. And even those unable to gain nearness to the scene will have the services brought to them by means of broadcasting, thus for the first time in history, enabling countless thousands to participate in the final obsequies of a former president.

The national capital itself will render to Mr. Wilson all the tribute possible. At 3:30 p. m., when the body is lowered into the crypt, tolling bells will carry the message and all business throughout the city will cease for two minutes. Street cars and motor cars will halt their traffic, pedestrians will uncover in the street, clerks in stores will adjourn their labors and the whole city will stand still in his memory.

The government departments discharged their thousands of workers at 12:30 p. m., that they may participate in the capital ceremonies.

For Woodrow Wilson there will be no march down Pennsylvania avenue with the flood of memories that such a march would bring, no clatter of military, no muffled drums and dirgeful colors, no black caisson and draped bands. He did not wish it. And so he will be buried this afternoon as has been no other president of the United States in history, as a private citizen for whom there should be no ostentatious show of sorrow or display of pomp.

And as he was a breaker of precedents in life, so will he be in death. He will be buried this afternoon within the boundaries of the District of Columbia, the only one of his office to find a final resting place within sight of the familiar scenes of his life's greatest work.

More than a dozen motor truck loads of flowers were carried from the Wilson home to the Cathedral shortly before noon. The floral offerings mounted to such proportions that it was feared there would be no room in the house for those who attended the funeral this afternoon.

Among those who left cards this morning were former Secretary of War Newton D. Baker, former Secretary of Commerce W. A. Redfield, former Secretary of Labor W. B. Wilson, Frank White, former chairman of the Democratic national committee, and a delegation representing the Chicago City Council, headed by Alderman George Maypole.

Mine Flooded, Forty-Two Die

By Telegraph to The Freeman

Crosby, Minn., Feb. 6.—Forty-two miners perished when the bottom fell out of a small pond and flooded the workings of the Milford iron mine near here late yesterday. Caught in the lower levels of the small mine only seven of the crew of forty-nine at work were able to gain the safety of a skip and ascend to the surface. Their comrades were suffocated by the slimy mud and water that gushed through the workings, rising to within a few feet of the top of the shaft in fifteen minutes. There was no extended warning; just a "tumble like a thousand auto mobiles roaring down a distant road," one survivor said. Then the wave of death engulfed them, battering its victims against the walls. Night found standing at the shaft opening scores of wives and mothers and children, some in frantic tears, others dry eyed and staring, as helplessness as were the men about them to save the trapped men.

AN INTERESTING AND TYPICAL SPRING TAILLEUR.

(By Eleanor Gunn.)

The suit is prominently exploited for spring, occupying in a measure the position of leading protagonists in the various style roles displayed. Citing suits for this style leadership does not imply a diminution of consideration for coats, for this type is likewise comprehensive in style and scope.

Interest is centered upon the tailored suit both in its mannish treatment, and again in its modified version of sports conception. Still another division in the suit development is the costume suit, generally a matter of three-piece composition.

One of the features of the boyish tailored suit is the curved, fitted outline, definitely recognized in the tapering line from shoulder to waistline. In details of cut and minor accessories, as well as choice of fabrics, the features of the boyish prototype are duplicated. One especially striking model is presented with jacket and skirt developed in fabrics that suggest the clothes associated with a man's afternoon suit, adding white waist as a finishing point of resemblance.

In the suits of sports derivation, formed into styles that make them feasible for street or other utilitarian purposes, fabrics of novel appeal are of major consideration. These range from broad striped weaves, such as Alsace de laine, a kind of serge, to fine twills. Tans and grays are mentioned with special favor in suits.

The short, hip-length jacket or straight box cut is noted repeatedly in this type of suit, the abbreviated length in many instances striking an especially youthful note. The use of sleeves inclining more toward width than the regulation fitted, tailored sleeve, is a feature of suits of this order, corresponding with the straight lines of the body of the garment.

One version of the trimmed tailored suit, adopted from Premet, is marked by fine silk pipings of contrasting color introduced in the front of the jacket, upon which are applied little distended pockets. (Copyright, 1924, Fairchild.)

THE OFFICE CAT

By Junius

Reproving Him.

"Quoocompluckity, glubshy, globbity, waump!" gobbled a greedy customer in a rapid fire restaurant.

"Say," chided Margaret, the waitress, "we like to see a guy enjoy his dinner, but we kinda hate to hear him."

The Limit.

"Your husband is very absent-minded, isn't he?"

"Oh, my yes. Last night he got up to get me a glass of water, and he drank it himself and went back to bed."

The more some people tell you, the less you remember.

Disinterested.

Minister—"So you want to get married?"

Mild Mr. Shrimp—"Not particularly, but this lady does."

Oh!

"That fellow is a regular crank, isn't he?"

"No wonder. He is in summer vaudeville and has to do six turns a day."

Correct this sentence—"I feel it my duty," whispered the ticket scalper, "to tell you that this seat I'm selling you in the twenty-third row is behind a post."

A Doer.

What does your father do, William?

Simple Duds Are More Serviceable

Modest Outfit Has More Distinction Than Conspicuous Model.

To no one is an attractive appearance more essential than to the business girl. While clothes do not make the woman, nevertheless they have a lot to do with the impression she creates, and first impressions count for a great deal.

This does not mean that it is necessary to dress like a debutante going to tea or to a fashionable luncheon, as many girls seem to think.

The first thing to learn and to hold to is that there is nothing smarter than simplicity of the right kind. A well-made simple frock or suit has infinitely more distinction than the more conspicuous models whose vogue wanes quickly.

Within the last few years so many women have gone into business that they have become an important factor in the world of clothes. Designers, realizing this, have given thought to their needs and the result is that it is possible to buy frocks that are appropriately simple and yet have certain individual touches which take away any suggestion of uniformity.

The evening dress has two of the salient points of the winter fashions. One is the tiered front of circular flounces and another is that it is white. Collections show a large number of white frocks, crystal trimmed or with a touch of silver embroidery.

She is a wise woman who knows the "does and don'ts" of fashion. One must study carefully the various styles as they are presented and, out of many, select those few that are best adapted to one's needs and environment.

It is not enough to buy clothes that are correct from the standpoint of fashion and appropriateness. They must be worn properly and with each detail in perfect harmony with the rest of the costume.

Several rules which one of the leading designers recently gave out as the secret of a smart appearance this season are well worth following. The first rule is "be feminine and discreet and wear a wide skirt, thus gaining in grace and freedom of movement"; next is "worship embroideries and welcome furs, the handsomest of all trimmings."

Another point that he emphasizes is that one should wear glowing colors and choose rich materials. Also to bear in mind that evening gowns are never too gorgeous.

Then follows a list of "don'ts" and under this heading comes the admonition "not to reveal too indiscreetly what ought only to be guessed at." He cautions against a tendency toward tails too tailored in effect and also advises against wearing black exclusively.

Fans Still Popular; Many Designs Show

Fans are so fashionable this year that new designs are constantly being shown. The big feather fans grow more and more gorgeous, and other fans are of rare lace mounted on sticks of shells of mother-of-pearl. To the shopper with a long purse these are now quite the usual thing, but the variations are many. Tiny fans, the open-and-shut sort, are of silk gauze on fancy sticks, with a landscape or groups painted on with tiny spangles. The most stunning new fans are of gauze, with tortoise shell sticks, the material glittering with paillettes. These are effective with the latest evening gowns.

Fancy Dress for Tots

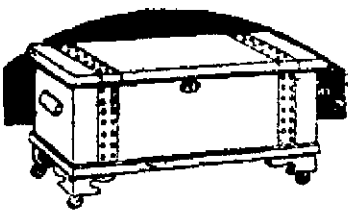

Much originality is displayed in the fancy dress costumes for little girls. One little white and gold frock represents a clock with all the numerals and the two hands on the front. On the back are little signs reading "Fast," "Slow" and "Wind." Another costume features all the notes in the musical scale.

NEWS GATHERING ABROAD.

Writing in the New Republic, Constance Drexel, who has herself acted as a news gatherer in Europe, takes the ground that foreign correspondents are largely responsible for the international jealousy and animosities which lead to war. Some of the fraternity, she says, are constitutionally dishonest in their handling of foreign news, while others are not free because their employers insist on receiving only such news as is in harmony with the views already announced in their columns. The lady journalist who thus so readily turns and rends her fellow craftsmen is mildly reminded by the New York Times that there are newspapers and newspapers, just as there are people and people, and moreover—that to most questions there are two sides and that in some of the instances regarded as demonstrating a vicious determination to distort the news, the writers of the dispatches or letters may be expressing the exact truth as they see and understand it.

Court records will abundantly support this view. Innumerable times eye-witnesses of the same event, or act, sworn to tell only the truth, have given accounts which, when contrasted, revealed startling variations, and the phenomenon has been accepted by intelligent and grave observers as not necessarily implying dishonesty. No doubt Miss Drexel could have found instances of infidelity to correspondents to present an altogether unprejudiced view, as is asserted by the Times, which pointedly concludes: "That even the best intentioned of foreign correspondents does not always tell the whole truth and nothing but the truth must be admitted; to say so, however, is only to say that correspondents are fallible mortals like the rest of humanity."

NO CAUSE TO WORRY.

There are those who always howl before they are hurt, but fortunately there are those who never lose their poise, no matter what happens. The former are well meaning, perhaps, but they are naturally calamity howlers. If there is a chance to say that everything is going wrong they can not withhold utterance. Those who have the disposition to wait and not become alarmed over anything are the people who are invariably ready in any actual emergency.

The minute the Teapot Dome story broke there were those who saw all hands, high and low, involved, not excluding President Coolidge. He should, according to some views have had knowledge of the transactions and should have prevented them before they were even conceived. Notwithstanding that Mr. Coolidge acted wisely and as promptly as anybody could act, this, in the opinion of those who render decisions without thinking, was no excuse for the oil leases being signed, even before he was president or in a position where he had any authority.

It is fortunate that the majority of the people are sane and that they can be looked to not to go off half cocked. It is also fortunate that the majority can be counted on to wait for the evidence before they announce a verdict. In the instance of the oil controversy there is no doubt whatever that the facts will be obtained and those guilty will be punished. It is also just as certain that if the case becomes a civil action it will be pressed to the limit. President Coolidge will see to this because he is Calvin Coolidge.

"TWILIGHT OF THE BRAIN."

In a particularly frank mood the editor of the Vossische Zeitung recently observed that the German people are suffering from "twilight of the brain," that they "still have the idea that they have not lost the war," and that they are getting "farther and farther away from the reparations problem." The German Colonial Society seems to be a victim of this "twilight of the brain" malady in an aggravated form, for it has boldly announced that unconditional restoration of Germany's African colonies with all pre-war rights is the price that must be paid for a new remedy to prevent the tropical disease called sleeping sickness which is in the society's possession. In this remedy Germany "holds the key to Central Africa," says Dr. Zache. "No colonies, no remedy," firmly announces Edouard Achelis, and both are convinced that in this remedy for sleeping sickness Germany "has a powerful weapon which places her in a position to force the revocation of the colonial mandates executed under the Versailles Treaty."

While the allied governments take no notice of all the preposterousness and readers of cable dispatches turn their eyes quickly to matters of some interest and importance, a few persons will pause to wonder which of the two diseases is the more devastating, sleeping sickness or "twilight of the brain."

BEING CAREFUL ABOUT MUMPS.

That a mild epidemic of mumps seems to be about this year is well known to physicians and parents.

Unfortunately a number of "grown ups" are also affected, so that a few words about this trouble might be of interest and of service.

It is simply an inflammation of one of the salivary glands—the glands that manufacture the saliva in the mouth.

The strange thing about it is that it does not seem to interfere with the saliva in any way, no change in its composition.

You remember what the youngster looks like with a well developed case of mumps. There is a swelling of the neck, just below the ear, which actually lifts the lobe of the ear out of its place.

In fact, it is the displacement of the lobe of the ear upward and outward that is one of the sure signs of mumps. The lobe stands at such a distance outward that it is plainly noticeable.

Sometimes the swelling extends beyond the region beneath the ear right over to the entire cheek, over to the eye, or even down into the neck to the collar bone.

Another peculiar thing about the swelling is, that although it stretches the skin until it is shiny, the skin never becomes red as it does in other swellings.

Sometimes there is no pain worth speaking about, but other times, especially in adults, the pain is severe, and the act of chewing or swallowing greatly increases the pain.

There is, of course, some temperature, but only for two or three days.

Now why do I write about it? Because as it takes two to three weeks to properly develop, you may wonder just what is coming over you when mumps is underway in your system.

Furthermore, that the possibility of being infected lasts also for a long time, as much as six weeks sometimes.

Also that although fortunately in the majority of cases there are no complications, still there are some painful affections in other parts of the body very often.

The idea therefore is to take mumps seriously until all the swelling is gone, and you are free from pain and temperature.

Being careless may bring on complications and delay recovery for weeks.

GET ACID PHOSPHATE FOR ONLY $9.60 TON

Soils Men at State College Tell How This is Possible.

The 4-12-4 mixed fertilizer—one of New York's "high-five"—gives the farmer an opportunity of purchasing some acid phosphate at the rate of $9.60 a ton for the standard 16 per cent grade. This is how the soils men at the state college at Ithaca figure this out, even though acid phosphate is selling around $18.

This high analysis fertilizer is priced at exactly $2.40 a ton more than the 4-8-4. For this additional investment, the farmer receives the equivalent of 500 pounds of 16 per cent acid phosphate. This is at the rate of $9.60 a ton for acid phosphate delivered, and in fact, applied to the land.

When mixed fertilizer is to be used for grain crops, beans, peas, cabbage, and potatoes grown in field crop rotation, this 4-12-4 is recommended by the college as the best buy for New York farmers. One ton is worth nearly as much as two tons of the old 2-8-2 and costs less than 40 per cent more.

Why consider even the 4-8-4 mixed fertilizer when the 4-12-4 furnishes the additional 500 pounds of acid phosphate for only $9.60 a ton? The soils men ask. "This is less than half the normal cost of acid phosphate applied to New York farm land. At 1924 prices, the 4-12-4 should appeal to those who desire a complete fertilizer for field crops."

HOW

TO TEST HOLLOW TILES WITH HYDRAULIC DEVICE.—In a series of tests made by the bureau of standards in a 10,000,000-pound hydraulic testing machine, and described in Technological Paper No. 239 of that bureau, walls made of common fireclay tiles 12 inches long, 12 inches wide and either 6, 8 or 12 inches thick were tested to the point of failure. These tiles were first tested individually and their strength was found to be much greater than that of those usually used in building construction. Their design was such that all the net area was in bearing when carefully set on end in the wall. Owing to the fact that the walls were very carefully set by an experienced mason they are considered to have been stronger than those usually used in buildings.

Of the 32 walls which were tested about half were built with the cells of the tile vertical and the other half with them horizontal. A few walls of each construction were tested under an eccentric load 2 inches off center.

It was found that considerable differences in the strength of the tile did not have an appreciable effect on the strength of the walls. No relation was found between the ultimate strength and the load at first crack. Walls having the cells of the tile vertical had, on the average, more than twice the strength of those having the cells horizontal. Walls loaded with an eccentricity of 2 inches had about one-half the strength of similar walls axially loaded. Apparently this ratio is independent of the thickness of the wall.—Scientific American.

How to Photograph Clouds With Camera

A few weeks ago the French meteorological office invited photographers to submit photographs of the sky taken in varying circumstances, with a view to making use of the pictures in the study of weather conditions.

Clouds are said to be difficult to photograph, but this is only the case where one wishes to photograph a landscape at the same time. When the object is to make negatives of clouds only a quick exposure with any ordinary camera will do the work.

Amateurs with cheap cameras which have only one snapshot speed can get over the difficulty by stopping down the lens to less than half its usual opening. Then they must be careful to develop the film or plate until the image of the clouds is just beginning to show on the back, when it will be time to put the film in the fixing bath.

Those with better-class cameras may use self-screen plates, stopping down to F16 and making an exposure of one-fifth part of a second.

Even better work may be done by using orthochromatic plates and a color screen on the front of the lens. When using a three-times screen the lens may be stopped down to F11 and an exposure of one-tenth second, or if weather is bright, one-twenty-fifth second may be given. The rule for development mentioned above applies in all cases.—London Tit-Bits.

How Sea Nettles Sting

The sting is caused by the discharge of minute cells known as nematocysts. Each nematocyst, or stinging capsule, consists of a tough oval capsule filled with fluid, and invaginated at one end in the form of a hollow process which is continued into a long, coiled, hollow thread. At one point of its outer surface there is developed a delicate trigger hair known as the onchocil. When the onchocil is touched the surrounding tissues suddenly contract, thus causing the coiled thread to be discharged. The end of the thread is provided with minute barbs. These threads are poisonous, and are the immediate cause of the sting. It is not thought that these animals purposely bring themselves into contact with persons when in the water. What happens is that they are simply brought in by the tide, and are so numerous at times that it is impossible to avoid contact with them.

How U. S. Got Hot Springs

Hot Springs, Ark., is widely noted for the hot waters that flow from 72 springs, included in a space of ten acres on the west side of Hot Springs mountain. The waters of these springs range in temperature from 78 degrees Fahrenheit to 157 degrees Fahrenheit, and are especially beneficial in the treatment of chronic diseases. In 1892 four sections of land were set off by congress as a government reservation. Since then the government has established on the mountain the army and navy general hospital.

How Expression Originated

Judge Halliburton, author of "Sam Slick," popularized the interesting fact that Job's turkey had but one feather in his tail, and had to lean against the fence to gobble. Obviously, the reference is to the deplorable indigence to which Job was reduced when delivered over to Satan. The fact that Job couldn't have a turkey (for the bird is a native of America) was probably not present in the mind of the originator of the expression.

Asa G. Candler & Mrs. Onozima De Bouchell

By Telegram to The Freeman.
Atlanta, Feb. 6.—The jury in the de Bouchell-Candler $500,000 breach of promise suit yesterday returned a verdict in favor of Asa G. Candler, Sr., the defendant.
Neither Mrs. Onozima de Bouchell of New Orleans, who sued Mr. Candler, nor the defendant was in the court room when the verdict was returned. The jury was out about forty-five minutes and its verdict merely said: "We, the jury, find a verdict for the defendant."
Only one ballot was taken.

"WOODROW WILSON IS DEAD."

Woodrow Wilson is Dead.

Admiral Cary T. Grayson, U. S. N., physician of Woodrow Wilson and probably his most intimate friend, is shown with tears streaming down his face and his voice broken with sorrow, as he tells Washington correspondents in the doorway of Mr. Wilson's S street home that the great War President is dead.

The Rhapsodists.
The Rhapsodists were a class of men in ancient Greece, who wandered from place to place and recited the productions of Homer, Hesiod and other poets. They were held in high esteem, and to them, doubtless, is due the credit for the wide diffusion of the Homeric poems in the ancient Greek world. After these ballads were collected and reduced to connected epics by Pindar (612-572 B. C.), the importance of the Rhapsodists gradually declined.

The Whale-Shark.
The whale-shark species of fish is found in various parts of the world, particularly in the Indian ocean. Several specimens have been caught off the Florida coast. On June 1, 1912, Capt. Charles H. Thompson caught one there 35 feet long and 18 feet in girth. It was not placed on scales, but its weight was estimated to have been between 10,000 and 30,000 pounds. The "whale-shark" is harmless to man, and feeds only upon very minute animal life.

Many Crops of Leaves.
Evergreen trees differ from deciduous trees, which shed all their leaves annually, in that the leaves of evergreen trees last for a full year or more. This means, says Nature Magazine of Washington, that one crop of leaves can always be found on an evergreen tree and sometimes as many as five or even ten annual leaf crops at one time.

Source of Sun's Heat.
The source of the vast amount of heat which the sun gives off cannot be the result of combustion, for if such were the case it would have been consumed long ago. The Helmholtz theory is generally accepted. It assumes that the sun's bulk is gradually contracting, and that the energy thus produced is turned into heat. It has been calculated that a contraction of 150 feet a year would be enough to account for the heat developed.

Some Animals Can't Swim.
According to the best authorities, all animals, excepting monkeys and perhaps the three-toed sloth, either swim naturally or go through the motions of swimming when suddenly immersed in water. There are, however, several animals that, although they swim naturally, drown as they swim. This is the case with rabbits, mice, moles and the smaller cats, drowning being the result of the fur becoming saturated.

Platinum Once Thrown Into Ocean.
The Spanish government at one time forbade the export of platinum from South America, and ordered it thrown into the sea to prevent its use as an adulterant for gold.

BOY SCOUTS

(Conducted by National Council of the Boy Scouts of America.)

NEW BOY SCOUT BADGE

Blind, crippled and otherwise physically handicapped boy scouts who have not been eligible to work for Merit badges because of their disabilities prevented them from fulfilling the requirements for second class rank and for first class rank, whence the scout is permitted to enter the fascinating Merit badge field, will be heartened in their advance in scoutcraft by the recent decision of the executive board of the national council to create an Achievement badge for physically handicapped scouts in recognition of certain requirements. The badge will permit them to take up with modification any of the 63 Merit badge subjects, which range from aviation to zoology and include such other subjects of boy interest as radio, wood craft, electricity, tracking, trailing, swimming, packing, etc.

The present decision wisely moderates or lowers the regularly prescribed standards of scouting; it rather represents a means by which physically disabled scouts may be encouraged to maximum achievement.

To qualify for the Achievement badge, the scout will proceed as for second and first class rank, except that he shall also present a written application signed by a registered physician, addressed to the local court of honor, explaining the apparent physical disability which makes it impossible for him to meet the prescribed requirements.

It is further recommended that scouts making application for the new Achievement badge be encouraged to exercise their own initiative and judgment in devising and passing some test within their physical capacity as evidence of their scout spirit and their eagerness to develop to the fullest their abilities.

The Achievement badge is to be in both metal and cloth. The cloth badge is to be worn on the sleeve with any Merit badge subsequently awarded.

Because of the many appealing cases of deserving and efficient scouts, displaying in their daily lives highest ideals of scouting, but who because of physical handicaps have been hindered in official advancement in rank, the organization after special and sympathetic consideration has arrived at the foregoing decision.

BOY SCOUT, HEALTH WORKER

A garbage can became the unusual theme for special appreciation of the scout spirit in a recent account by the New York Mail, of a scout good turn.

A lady of the tenements, relating the incident, says: "Yesterday morning the bell rang and I answered there stood a little fellow in a brown suit with a colored handkerchief round his neck. 'Say,' he says, 'you got a garbage pail out on the curb that's slopping over, without a cover on it. You ought to have a larger one.' Well, I told the kid that we didn't have any too much money, and what we did have didn't go to buy garbage pails every time some fresh kid wanted us to. 'But, you see,' he says, 'I'm a boy scout and I'm trying to win a Merit badge in public health. Now that pail of yours is open, so the flies can get into it; then they fly straight into your house and walk all over the stuff you eat with their dirty feet. Besides, it's against the law.'"

"I'm sorry," I says, "but I have no money to get one." He looked at me a minute without saying a word and then went off. I forgot about it entirely. This morning the bell rang again, and there stood the kid holding that new pail in his hand. 'Here,' he says, 'shoving it at me, 'the fellows in my troop want me to give this to you. We all chipped in and got it.' Then he got all red in the face, saluted and ran away.

"God bless the kid. If all them boy scouts is like that, they're all right."

SCOUT GOOD TURNS NUMEROUS

"Each boy scout is pledged to do a good deed daily, and a half million good deeds in unison may reverberate to the very portals of St. Peter's gate. Half a million youngsters who can perform an act of spontaneous kindness without a thought of a forthcoming tip would be worth a great deal. If there were nothing more. The eagerness with which youngsters join the boy scout organization and the loyalty with which they uphold the scout banner, are testimony to one of the remarkable social achievements of recent years."—Port Townsend (Wash.) Leader.

"A SCOUT IS BRAVE"

The tenth scout law—"A Scout is Brave"—has a touching little illustration in a story reported from a Pittsburgh hospital. As the nurse was bringing a twelve-year-old boy patient out of the anaesthetic after a serious operation, she found lying in the palm of the lad's right hand a scrap of crumpled paper. Straightening out the scrap to see if it had any bearing on the lad's welfare, she read the words, scrawled in a boyish hand—"A Scout is Brave."

His Chief Qualification.

Aldermen Held Brief Session

Met Tuesday Evening and Adjourned to Thursday Out of Respect to Former President Wilson and Former Corporation Counsel W. D. Brinnier.

The common council met Tuesday evening in regular monthly session at the city hall but adjourned to Thursday evening out of respect to former President Woodrow Wilson and former Corporation Counsel William D. Brinnier.

All of the aldermen were present when President Dempsey called the meeting to order. Mayor Morris Block's proclamation on the death of the former president and Alderman Schlip's resolutions of respect in memory of the former corporation counsel were read by City Clerk Styles and ordered spread in full on the minutes of the common council meeting by a rising vote of the council.

Mayor's Proclamation.
Mayor Block's proclamation was as follows:

To the People of the City of Kingston, N. Y.:
Woodrow Wilson, former President and one of the world's great statesmen has passed into the great beyond. The announcement of his death generates indeed a deep sense of genuine sorrow. In this sad event is recognized the passing of a noble character, who, in accordance with his honest judgment, consecrated his splendid intellectual and moral powers to the welfare of his beloved country and to secure the priceless benefits of justice and peace for all mankind. Too much honor cannot be accorded to the memory of the statesmanship and patriotic services of this distinguished American in whose death civilization has suffered a grievous loss.

Now, therefore, I, Morris Block, Mayor of the City of Kingston, do hereby direct that the flags on all public buildings in the City of Kingston be displayed at half staff for thirty days, and that on Wednesday, the day of the funeral, all municipal offices be closed during the hour of the funeral, and I respectfully request that all private business be suspended during the hour set apart for the funeral.

MORRIS BLOCK,
Mayor, of the City of Kingston, N. Y.

In Memory of Brinnier.
Alderman Schlip offered the following resolution which was unanimously adopted:

It is with profound sorrow that the members of the Common Council of the City of Kingston announce the death, since its last meeting, of the Honorable William D. Brinnier, Corporation Counsel of the city of Kingston and a former Mayor, a gentleman for whom this body entertained the highest respect and deepest affection.

He was a good citizen, a proficient public official and a loyal friend; a man of high personal character, with lofty ideals of official service and of most exemplary habits; courteous and considerate in his dealings—honorable and upright in his intercourse with his fellow men—he was a fine type of the best American citizenship. Resolved, that the Common Council enter this memorandum in full upon its minutes, and that a copy attested by the city clerk be forwarded to the members of Mr. Brinnier's family.

MAKES DEATH MASK OF WILSON.

Dr. V. Fortunato and assistant.

The exact likeness of Woodrow Wilson will live for all time in a death mask, the cast of which was taken by Dr. Vladimir Fortunato, a medical sculptor of Johns Hopkins University, and a woman assistant. The mask will remain the property of Mrs. Wilson, but will be available for sculptors and art students. Dr. Fortunato is shown with the cast under his arm as he left the S street home of Mr. Wilson in Washington.

The above is an artistic study of Miss Harriet Hewitt, former mannequin in a New York hat shop, drawn by Harrison Fisher, the noted artist. The beautiful model will become the bride of Oliver Carley Harriman, son of the millionaire New York banker, as soon as the first Mrs. Harriman's interlocutory divorce decree becomes final. Young Harriman is a bachelor, clubman and noted sportsman.

Levermore Bok Prize Winner

Dr. Charles Herbert Levermore of New York city, secretary of the New York Peace Society and former president of Adelphi College of Brooklyn, is the author of the Bok peace prize plan.

Disclosure of his identity was made in Philadelphia Monday night at a meeting at the Academy of Music, when John W. Davis, former ambassador to Great Britain, representing Edward W. Bok, giver of the award, presented to him a check for $50,000. The second half of the $100,000 offered by Mr. Bok will be awarded to Dr. Levermore if the "Referendum" on the plan, now in progress, shows that it has sufficient popular support to fulfill the condition of "practicable" in the opinion of the jury of award.

References to the death of Woodrow Wilson, leading American advocate of the League of Nations, in Dr. Levermore's plan, cooperation with which is advocated, were made by all the speakers. Mr. Davis if it were not possible that Mr. Wilson's legacy to his countrymen would not be a realization of his vision of world-wide and perpetual peace.

A MARKET WHERE A DOLLAR WENT LONG WAYS

That of Fifty Years Ago Between Strand and Ferry Street.

How many residents of the village of Rondout of over half a century ago are now alive? It is safe to say not many. Those that still exist no doubt will remember the old Fister Market, which ran from the Strand through to Ferry street about where the Lyric theatre now stands. On the Strand side of the market the Webers, father and three sons, occupied a butcher shop, opposite to which was a grocery store kept by Samuel Brundage. In the center of the market, next to the Webers, Mat. Sapp kept a fruit and vegetable market. A son of Mr. Sapp, Joseph, who helped his father in his business, is still alive, being well over 70 years of age. Opposite the Sapp place was "Pop" Harrison's coffee and cake stall. Next to Sapp's, on the Ferry street side, was the butcher shop of the Ostranders, across the way from which Truman Preston served customers with fish, oysters and clams. This market was largely patronized. With a dollar a person could come out with a good sized market basket filled with good things to eat. Like the proprietors of the places mentioned the market has long since passed away.

GOLDEN HORSESHOE ROSEATE FROM SHADED ROSE GOWNS

Certainly New York society has been unusually faithful to the red and green color ranges this winter, especially when attending the opera. At a recent performance at the Metropolitan many selected gowns in shades of rose, from the most delicate flesh tint to deep geranium or cherry. So marked was this that it seemed as if a soft rose glow was diffused throughout the Golden Horseshoe.

These gowns were simple in cut and conception, many being the untroubled velvets so prevalent this season, while others were of crepe satin or flat crepe, with rhinestone or other beading decoration. Occasionally a self-colored brocade appeared in this tone, one being accompanied by a wrap to match, which boasted of a hemline and shoulder deep cape of wine colored velvet.

The tinsels were, of course, in evidence but not nearly so much so as early this winter. Often these combined a two-tone background of gold and rose.

Black velvet, selected by many of the older women, rarely effected an all-black ensemble, being relieved in one instance by a lightly gathered deep bertha of Dutch lace which framed the oval décolletage. In another instance, an all-black velvet showed a square insert of brilliant ermine in the bodice just under the square cut neckline. Another treatment which was interesting because of its difference was also found on a black velvet costume, the décolletage being square with dropped shoulders and a crescent-shaped slash below.

Wraps still find preference given to all fur types; rich chinchilla, mink, ermine and blond ermine are noted, although velvet, richly beaded, was, of course, chosen by many as were the metal brocades.

Unique touches seemed a part of the accessories, and while willowed ostrich fans in all gay shades in contrast to the frocks trailed gracefully over the edge of the boxes, one quite out of the ordinary was a five-feathered one of clipped and uncured ostrich, green on one side and rose on the other. The feathers were fastened together so that the fan seemed all in one. Fine black lace fans as well as those of the soft narrow feathers of the baby ostrich, were also carried.

There were many bandeaux affected, as well as jeweled effects, but these were contrasted by headresses a bit bizarre. One, for instance, was a tightly fitting skull cap of brown tulle, elaborately trimmed with green leaves and a spray of white gardenias at one side. Another showed the hair parted down the center with a crushed bandeau of metal. A braid of hair intertwined with pearls was laid across the center of the head to the ears.

THIS TIME AGGIE IS LEADER BY 23 POUNDS.

Made 107.7 Pounds of Butter Fat for October, Report Shows.

Aggie, the famous Livingston county grade Holstein, owned by S. W. Barber of Scottsburg, far outdistanced her nearest competitor both in butter fat and milk production for October, the summarized reports of the dairy improvement associations of New York state show. Aggie produced 107.7 pounds of fat and 2,834.4 pounds of milk during the month. Second place went to Number 27, a Holstein, Friesian, from Oneida county owned by the Kenotin Farm of New Hartford. She lacked more than 23 pounds, however, of equalling Aggie's figure for butter fat. She produced 84.5 pounds of fat and 1,760.8 pounds of milk.

Shay, a Livingston county grade Holstein, owned by F. Culbertson & Sons of Dansville, ran the Oneida cow close race for second place, since she lacked only .4 of a pound of equalling Number 27's butter fat record.

Number 20, owned by Kenotin Farm, who ranked fifth in butter fat with 79.5 pounds, took third place in milk production with 1,767 pounds.

Fourth place in butter fat went to Number 5, a Kenotin Farm Holstein, Friesian, with 82 pounds. Fourth place in milk production was taken by Shay with 1,751.5 pounds, and fifth place by Number 5, with 1,745.3 pounds.

more Ford cars and trucks were produced last year than the previous year, an increase of over 50 per cent.

In spite of this tremendous increase in production, it was impossible to meet delivery requirements during the spring and summer months when orders for 350,000 Ford Cars and Trucks could not be filled.

This year winter buying for immediate delivery has been more active than ever before—and in addition 200,000 orders have already been booked through the Ford Weekly Purchase Plan for spring delivery.

These facts clearly indicate that the demand during this spring and summer will be far greater than ever, and that orders should be placed immediately with Ford Dealers as a means of protection against delay in securing your Ford Car or Truck or Fordson Tractor.

IN THE WOODS

The great trees of the woods were making. It was dark and cool and still and only the moon shone through from time to time just to see that all was well and to hear a few words of what was going on.

The branches of the trees away a little for Mr. Wind was paying visits about and as he hurried along he was saying a how-to-you-do to all his friends and they were answering him.

"Before long the spring will be here. It is a little while off as yet, but before long it will come," said one of the evergreen trees. "It will be beautiful then."

"Buds will appear and blossoms and soft delicate leaves and then lovely strong green leaves will be the result."

"But I am glad we are of the great woods and of the evergreen family. 'Ah yes, that is the best of all.'"

And then Mr. Moon peeped in and said: "May I tell you a story?"

The deep woods were all adrift with excitement. Every one of the big, magnificent trees, and the shorter, strong, splendid little green trees waved and swayed a little with the joy they were to have in a story told them by Mr. Moon.

The Lovely Dark Green Trees.

"Yes," Mr. Moon continued, "and it is a true story."

"Won't you sit down, Mr. Moon?" they asked. And every tree moved to show Mr. Moon he would be welcome to settle down on their branches.

But Mr. Moon winked his eye.

"I'm too big, I thank you kindly, but I'll just look through while I stay on my sky perch."

"I speak as though I were a bird, don't I? But I'm not. I fancy you all know that."

The great trees laughed in their low, soft voices, and a murmuring as of music was heard throughout the forest. It was the echo of the laughter in the great woods.

"Last Christmas," said Mr. Moon, "I was about in my usual way, looking at this and looking at that, and I particularly noticed the city streets."

"For some time around the Christmas holidays the streets in so many places were lined with Christmas trees for sale."

"They were everywhere. And they had been brought for miles so that the city could have some Christmas trees for decorations."

"Everyone looked so happy and of course I could see how they would admire the lovely dark green trees."

The trees of the great woods bowed politely at the compliment.

"But I found out what made the people even happier than looking at the trees."

"That was being able to have a real whiff of the deep woods."

"They took long, deep breaths of it and they smiled."

"Yes, for just a little, little while the woods had gone to the cities and the people in the cities were happy with a great, great happiness."

"Some had lived near the woods when they were young. Others had never known anything save the cities and pavements and the lights of many stores, and they loved this beautiful fragrance of the woods, which is the loveliest fragrance in the world."

Once again the trees of the deep woods bowed and Mr. Moon added: "I know, too. I know the world pretty well, you know."

That made the compliment even finer and the trees bowed and swayed again and then they sang a song:

We rejoice that we
Or our family
Gave joy this year
And also cheer.
When they went to the city
For they said, "It's a pity
For town people to miss
The fragrance of this
Which we bring from afar."
So we rejoice that we
Or our family
Gave joy this year
And also cheer.

"Ah yes, they gave great cheer and great joy," said Mr. Moon, "and they made the people so happy. And I knew you'd like to hear of their reception in the cities so I told you this story—which is a true story as I said."

And the trees of the deep woods were happy with a great happiness that their fragrance had been taken to the cities for a time.

COLLECTION OF GOOD THINGS

For a tough portion of meat the following recipe will be found most desirable:

Beef en Casserole.—Put into a casserole one-fourth of a cupful of sweet fat; when hot add one cupful of the following mixture:

Equal parts of celery, carrots, onion and ham all chopped together. Cook the vegetables until brown, then lay them over four pounds of beef. Cover with a second cupful of the same mixture and cook in a hot oven three-quarters of an hour. Remove the meat from the casserole, strain off the vegetables, add a cupful of stock to the strained liquid and return to the casserole with the meat. Over the meat spread one cupful of raisins, cover and cook for one hour and a quarter longer.

Roast Veal au Jus.—Season a fillet of veal with salt and pepper and put into a pan with an onion, carrot, bay leaf, clove and small piece of suet. Place in a roaster, put into the oven to bake one-half hour, remove the cover, baste every five minutes for half an hour. Remove the meat to a platter, put a little water into the pan and let simmer five minutes. Strain and pour this gravy around the roast.

Pork Tenderloin.—Split a pork tenderloin lengthwise, leaving the halves joined. Pound the meat until one-half inch thick, then spread with the following stuffing: One cupful of bread crumbs, one-quarter teaspoonful of salt, a dash of pepper, a spray of chopped parsley, a tablespoonful of chopped pickles, capers, a tablespoonful of chopped olives, a little lemon juice. Mix with one-fourth of a cupful of butter and one beaten egg. Arrange the stuffing so that it will be higher in the center and sew or tie the edges of the meat together, so that it will resemble a plump boned bird. Bake, basting until well browned.

Macaroni With Nuts.—Take a cupful of macaroni, put it into a buttered baking dish, sprinkle with coarsely chopped nut meats, add one cupful of white sauce, cover with buttered crumbs and bake until the crumbs are brown.

It will pay in the end to spend a few minutes each day really relaxing—in a comfortable rocking chair, with eyes closed, jaw relaxed, and a calm mind.

Add to the soup pot the water from boiled vegetables, the bone from steak or ham, the backs of chicken and other game, and all left-overs that will add to the flavor.

ALBION FELLOWS BACON

If the names of women who are accomplishing things are familiar at all, the name of Albion Fellows Bacon will conjure up some memory in the vaguest mind. To get a vivid picture of the valuable work she is doing for better housing, alone, one must get well acquainted.

For a beginning, one ought to run through population statistics of the 1920 United States census. Get that unsentimental number of families, and number of domiciles I think is the word they use—available for those same families, on whose success the success of the nation rests. Read of city, town or country crossroads; choose from New York or Alabama or California—or any state. The sheer shortage of housing, irrespective of its adequacy in rooms or sanitation or other factors, is shocking. Then send to the National Housing association for some of the pamphlets Mrs. Bacon has written. Or hunt up the nearest wide-awake college or women's club, and see whether it hasn't a copy of "What Bad Housekeeping Means to the Community."

Whether there are positions to be filled by young women who want to be of service in promoting better housing, and who have not the creative vision of Mrs. Bacon, I do not know. Perhaps the association mentioned might know. Or a letter to the Bureau of Vocational Information, 2 West Forty-third street, New York city, would probably help. In any case, I should go in search of advice on how to learn housing in the small community and rural housing, to see if a program to fit my own home town could be worked out.

And I'd get acquainted with Mrs. Bacon. Not by a personal letter to Evansville. A busy woman cannot put much of herself into casual correspondence. I'd get at her spirit of service through the best she can write, which is what she has put in print. One is a book called "Beauty for Ashes". Another is "Consolation", published by the Atlantic Monthly Press. Another message is in the pageant, "Citizenship Day" written for the General Federation of Women's Clubs, and very attractively filmed, as I personally can testify, under the direction of Mrs. Baker and Mrs. Perry Penzance, at Chautauque. Anyone could easily find out how to show it locally. Speaking of local things and national ones in the same breath, do you know that any public library can get you any book in the United States congressional library—which means any in the United States—if you will pay the express?

Chronic coughs and persistent colds lead to serious trouble. You can stop them with Creomulsion, an emulsified creosote that is pleasant to take. Creomulsion is a new medical discovery with twofold action: It soothes and heals the inflamed membranes and kills the germ.

Of all known drugs, creosote is recognized by the medical fraternity as the greatest healing agency for the treatment of chronic coughs and colds and other forms of throat trouble. Creomulsion contains, in addition to creosote, other healing elements which soothe and heal the inflamed membranes and stop the irritation and inflammation, while the creosote goes on to the stomach, is absorbed into the blood, attacks the seat of the trouble and destroys the germs that lead to serious complications.

Creomulsion is guaranteed satisfactory in the treatment of chronic coughs and colds, catarrhal bronchitis and other forms of throat diseases, and is excellent for building up the system after colds or the flu. MacDonald Is Interviewed

Wants Russia and Germany in League of Nations—Relations With France Better and Securities Rise at Home.

(Copyright, 1924, By International News Service.)

By Telegram to The Freeman. London, Feb. 6.—Admission of Germany and Russia to the League of Nations was advised today by Premier Ramsay MacDonald in an exclusive interview.

"Ours is not a business men's government but I claim it is a business government," declared the Labor premier as he paced up and down in front of a blazing grate fire in the foreign office. The interview took place at a morning hour when many Londoners had not even breakfasted. MacDonald continued:

"We will not sit and watch events. We want the League of Nations to become a living force, but before this can be done Germany and Russia must be admitted. There will be difficulty in the case of Russia, but Germany's inclusion must be insisted upon. She must receive full and complete recognition on equal terms as a member of the league."

The premier was questioned about the newspaper accusation that recognition of Russia was only "paper recognition." He replied with vigor: "It is absolute. There is nothing to quibble about. We have given Russia our formal recognition, but the fact of diplomatic recognition does not prevent countries from having disputes and differences. For instance, we might have a quarrel with some European power and yet not withdraw our diplomatic representation."

"As for myself, I object to use of the phrase 'dejure' because it cannot be understood by the man in the street. As far as he is concerned Russia is either recognized or not recognized, and that is all he wants to know."

"But I understand the Soviet government at Moscow attaches some importance to the employment of this phrase and for that reason I was willing to subscribe to it."

Premier MacDonald then turned to the question of Germany. Asked if he expected France to oppose admission of Germany to the League of Nations, he replied:

"No, I believe Germany will be accepted as a member of the league and no difficulty will be encountered that cannot be overcome."

Premier MacDonald feels elated over the cordial reception given to the British Labor government by France.

"We felt a change of tone at once," explained the premier. "Our past governments hesitated and assumed negative attitudes. That was mainly responsible for misunderstandings with France. All that is gone. Great Britain no longer will be content to sit by and watch events, waiting for results. The outcome of this new attitude seems to be succeeding beyond our expectations. The French have definitely withdrawn their support from the Separatist movement in the German Rhineland. The French high commission in the Rhineland no longer requires registered decisions from the Separatist administration in the Palatinate."

Premier MacDonald laughed heartily when asked about the dismal prophecies that were made as the Labor party came into power. One was that securities of all kinds would decline and capital would be removed from the nation.

On the contrary, it is learned from financial circles, confidence in the Labor government has restored the price of securities and their prices are ascending. Business is looking forward to a period of stability and prosperity.

Company Flees From Arena in Rome When Attack Is Made.

By Telegram to The Freeman.

Rome, Feb. 6.—A lioness yesterday mauled to death an elderly Italian, Augusto Malombi, a "super" in a moving picture company which was filming "Quo Vadis." The entire company saw the tragedy.

Several lions and lionesses had been brought into the arena of the Circus Maximus of Nero, which was constructed for the picture. The lioness became highly excited jumped over the barrier, landed squarely upon Malombi and began tearing at flesh and crushing his bones with her huge paws.

Actors and actresses, directors, camera men and "extras" fled in terror from the arena. The keepers of the lions finally beat back the lioness into her place inside the arena after they had wounded her several times with revolver shots.

The police arrested the director of the film play. They say that the company filming the play was without authorization to have lions in the enclosure.

Williams Sent to Federal Jail

Negro, Admitting Plum Point Theft, to Serve One Year in Atlanta Penitentiary—Kingston Merchants Involved to Have Trial Later.

The Newburgh News says:

Richard Williams, a Newburgh negro, was recently sent to Atlanta Penitentiary for a term of one year and one day for complicity in the theft of $2,000 worth of hosiery and other articles from a West Shore train near Plum Point, south of this city. Others involved, including Kingston merchants to whom the stolen property is said to have been sold, are yet to come to trial.

In August of last year, while a freight train was stopping at Plum Point a raid was made upon it and a large quantity of goods stolen. After a patient inquiry these were traced to Kingston and some of the goods were found in Kingston stores from which they were recovered through search warrants. Several arrests were again made and again Williams was one of the prisoners. Life was taken by Undersheriff Leonard.

The former case had been heard in state courts but this later proceeding was brought in the United States courts, it being charged that the theft of goods was a federal offense under the Interstate Shipments Act. Williams was arraigned before Judge Bondy in the United States district court, pleaded guilty and sentence was imposed. The trials of the other cases are to come up later.

One Reason for Nervous Disorders

Your doctor can tell you that nervous disorders are very common among Americans. One reason for this is found in the fact that they are great coffee drinkers.

Coffee contains caffeine, a drug, prescribed by doctors as an emergency stimulant for the heart and nervous system. It has a tendency to increase blood pressure, develop heart irregularities and cause digestive disturbances.

If you feel that coffee is not good for you, serve Postum as your meal-time drink.

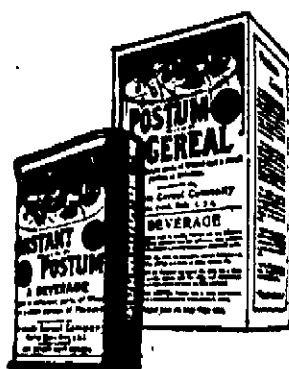

Postum is a pure cereal beverage that refreshes and satisfies. It is absolutely free from caffeine or any other irritating drug.

Try a cup of Postum with your dinner or supper tonight. Postum is sold everywhere.

Postum for Health

"There's a Reason"

Postum comes in two forms: Instant Postum (in nine) prepared instantly in the cup by the addition of boiling water. Postum Cereal (in packages) for those who prefer the flavor brought out by boiling fully 20 minutes. The cost of either form is about one-half cent a cup.

Masonic Hall Without Heat

The furnace in the Ulster County Savings Bank building on Wall street, which became overheated on Monday night when the drafts were left turned on during the evening, was placed out of commission by the intense heat. An examination showed that the boiler had been damaged and it would be necessary to make repairs. During the time repairs are being made it will be impossible to heat Masonic Hall on the upper floor of the building. It is expected that repairs will be completed by the last of the week. The timely discovery of the condition on Monday evening by Special Officer DeGraff and Officer Simpson undoubtedly prevented a serious fire in the building.

IS NOT DESERT OF VAST SAND WASTES

Sand Dunes Form Very Small Part of Sahara.

We have inherited from the school geographers of half a century ago a picture of Sahara—confirmed by numberless novels of shifting sand dunes, inhabited by camels and twany lions, and dotted here and there by the picturesque camps of Good Samaritans so necessary to the plans of novelists and scenario writers.

It will surprise many readers to learn that sand dunes form a very tiny part of the Sahara, that the characteristic formations, comprising more than three-fourths of its area, is not that of a flat plain, but of low, rocky mountain chains and rugged plateaus.

But other and even greater sacrifices of old beliefs must be made at the altar of truth, as revealed by modern exploration. No part of the Sahara is, within the meaning usually ascribed to the word, a desert—that is, no part of its vast area is completely sterile, no part is without at least occasional rainfall, and on the sand dunes, and even on the rocky wastes of the hills and plateaus, vegetation of some sort always exists.

But, having destroyed the ancient legend of the Sahara as a picturesque, but utterly barren expanse of territory, the temptation is strong now to rush to the other extreme and claim extravagantly that only the touch of man is required to transform it, from the Atlantic to the Nile, into one stupendous blossoming garden.

The French, particularly the French colonists in North Africa, are an enthusiastic and optimistic people, and they have not wholly succeeded in resisting this temptation. In spite, however, of natural and insurmountable difficulties of soil, of water supply and of climate, which will prevent the Sahara ever from supporting a large population in comparison to its size, there can be no doubt that during the next few generations a stupendous development will occur—Oscar Lewis in Outlook Magazine.

Killing Off Herons

Snowy herons nested forty years ago on marsh islands, usually in Casinia bushes, about the height of a man's head.

The plumes are the nuptial feathers of the birds, at their best in the nesting season. Soon after nesting has been finished the plumes are shed, being frayed and worn then, useless for trade purposes. Hence birds were shot on the nest, often with 22-caliber rifles, and the plumes cut away. Living birds have been captured, the plumes torn off, and the bird left to die a lingering death. The young in the nest starved.

Snowy herons were brought to the verge of extinction, for when a survey was made only seven birds were located in South Carolina and a handful in Georgia. The larger American egret nested in tall trees, but they were shot all the same and multiplied while feeding on the marshes, the birds being drawn by decoys—Nature Magazine.

Pay Up, Crisp Tells Europe

(Our Taxes Higher Than Those of Our Allies Because We Pay Interest on Money We Loaned Them.—France Has Made Three Big Loans in Past Year.)

By Telegram to The Freeman.

Washington, Feb. 6.—Definite pressure upon foreign nations to pay payment of their debts to the United States may be exerted soon by the American debt commission.

Representative Crisp, of Georgia, member of the commission, declared today that he expected to confer with Secretary of the Treasury Mellon to suggest a more definite and active policy toward the creditors of this country.

Funding of the $9,000,000 debt by Finland, recently approved by congress, stands as a notice to the debtor nations that the United States expects them to pay. Crisp said: "It will be suggested to Secretary Mellon, who is chairman of the debt commission, that the board be assembled and that it draft a courteous but firm note to each of the debtor nations, asking that they send representatives to the United States to arrange for funding of debts, according to Crisp.

The Georgia representative pointed out that debt payment has a definite relationship to reduction of taxes. "Today our taxes are higher than those of most of our Allies," Crisp declared. "Our people are being taxed millions of dollars to pay interest on the bonds sold to raise money loaned to the Allies. When these loans were made it was distinctly understood that the borrower nations would pay interest promptly that American taxpayers might be relieved of it.

"There is no excuse for debtor nations longer refusing to fund their indebtedness. By this procrastination they are alienating the sympathy and friendship of American taxpayers."

Crisp assailed France especially for her failure to fund her $4,000,000,000 debt, declaring that during last year France made loans to Poland, Yugoslavia and Rumania, totalling $80,000,000 francs, Crisp continued.

"Loans according to the French government were made to Poland and Yugoslavia for the purpose of stimulating sympathy for France in these countries and to Rumania that they might maintain a well equipped army to insure peace in the east.

"If France is able to make loans to these nations she is able to make some payment on her indebtedness to the United States."

He insisted that the government use all honorable economic and diplomatic methods to collect our foreign debt so that the people of the United States may be relieved of the tax loads they are now bearing. That the debtor nations "will realize at once the importance of funding their indebtedness" was the significant hope expressed by Crisp. It was understood to be the attitude of some members of the debt commission that no definite action should be taken by this government until the results of the reparations meetings in Paris and Berlin take definite form. France and other debtor nations take the stand that they cannot pay the United States until they obtain settlements with Germany.

Crisp protests that the United States debt directly with the Allies and that they must settle directly without regard to what they may receive from Germany.

No foreign debt commission meetings are scheduled in the near future, it was learned at the treasury. The total indebtedness with interest is over eleven billion dollars. Great Britain has funded her $4,600,000,000 debt. All debtors have been ordered the same terms as Great Britain and Finland—i. e. amortization of the loans over sixty-two years and reduction of interest to a nominal figure.

Surely, one of the compensations of this experience is that a girl can be darning and looking without winning a beauty contest.

stand a 125 room house, but he would rather see a start made with a house of 100 rooms and then increase by units of 25 or 50 rooms. On the basis of a 100-room house, the building would probably cost in the neighborhood of $3,000 a room, making the entire cost of the building about $300,000. Furnishing and equipment should be figured at $750 a room, (this cost, of course, including the complete equipment and furnishing of the hotel—dining room, office, lobby, etc., or a total of $75,000. The value of the site was a matter of difference of opinion, but it could be estimated at $40,000, which would be a fair price. This would bring the total cost to $415,000, approximately. The average room-space should be 5,000. By this, he did not mean that the guest rooms contain 5,000 cubic feet, but that the total cubic contents of the hotel, divided by the number of guest rooms, would amount to 5,000.

It is impossible, said Mr. Bobo, to build a modern hotel with an independent architect except at tremendous extra expense. Modern hotels were built by corporations which had had experience in such matters, who maintained their own staff of architects experienced in hotel construction besides engineers who were expert in their particular lines, all of whom must be consulted in planning and building a modern hotel. The J. G. White Corporation had built all the hotels which the United Hotels Corporation had helped to build.

The usual method of financing such hotels is by the sale of preferred stock for sixty per cent of the cost of the hotel, although this amount varies. The stock is sold locally, with a bonus of fifty per cent of common stock for each share of preferred stock purchased. The preferred stock carries a fixed dividend rate, and the operating company shares with the preferred stockholders on a 50-50 basis the net profits of the hotel operation. Control rests in a board of directors. Usually eight or ten—in which the operating company has the right to equal representation with the preferred stockholders, but the operating company usually places only two of its own men on the board. The remaining forty per cent of the cost, above the sixty per cent raised by sale of preferred stock, is secured on mortgage.

A new hotel in Kingston should be operated on the European plan, said Mr. Bobo, but should have a coffee room in addition to its regular dining service.

Before undertaking a contract with any community, said Mr. Bobo, the hotel corporation—either the United or the American—usually made its own investigation of conditions. The corporation found that a survey made by the Hockenbury system could be accepted at 100 per cent, and if the Hockenbury system did not favor a hotel proposition, the corporation did not spend any more time over it. On questions of site, the hotel corporation reserved the right to make its own decision as to what was the best site, and sometimes it disagreed with the Hockenbury system and sometimes with local opinion. Experience, however, guided the hotel corporations in such matters. It was possible for a community to erect a monument to the community in the form of a hotel, but most often such monuments did not pay. The hotel corporation, while realizing that Kingston had a most interesting history, was interested in the history only as it was an asset to the hotel business, for the corporations' business was the operation of hotels for profit.

Mr. Anderson of the J. G. White Corporation, who has had charge of plans for hotel construction for that company, displayed a number of plans of hotels now under construction, some hotels which had been completed, and sketches of other hotels which communities are considering building, among the latter being a new hotel at Port Jervis. The plans included also those of the new hotel at Schenectady, which the American Hotel Corporation will operate.

The directors decided to have a hotel survey of Kingston city made by the Hockenbury system, which will be without expense to the city or the Chamber of Commerce.

CURRENT OFFERINGS

AT THE THEATERS.

For the last times tonight at the Keeney Theatre will be shown "Little Old New York." The acting of Marion Davies is said to be one of the finest things about the picture. She is said to have skipped away with "Little Old New York" as though the big production were less than a chip on her shoulder. She fought and wept and danced, holding tense the thread of interest between the picture and the spectators. There is a trial scene of Fulton's Clermont, a fight, a whipping post and many other thrilling scenes.

As an added feature at the Opera House tonight will be the country store. The same vaudeville bill that has pleased large audiences the first two days will again be staged. "Victor Scherzinger's production, "Dollar Devils," will be shown for the last times. A new bill of vaudeville and a feature picture will be staged beginning Thursday.

The final showings of Emory Johnson's giant epic of the screen "The Mailman" will occur today at the Orpheum Theatre. The following scenes are pictured. The entire Pacific Fleet in action. The attack from the air. The submarines let go their blast of leaden missiles. The gray destroyers plunging in the trough of the sea. In all their soul-stirring drama, a dozen other colossal scenic cataclysms—in the monumental tribute to the U. S. Postal workers. Also vaudeville. Tomorrow all new show, six vaudeville acts and a wonderful picture "The Broken Wing" with an all star cast.

At the Auditorium today May McAvoy, Elliot Dexter, Lois Wilson and George Fawcett in "Only 38." Behind her were twenty years of suppressed youth. Then at thirty-eight—the prime of life—she breaks the chains that held happiness a prisoner. And lives the youthful life of her dreams. A bright comedy of character, with moments of exquisite tenderness. Max McAvoy, Lois Wilson, Elliot Dexter and George Fawcett in splendid characterizations.

CROWD HALF-MASTS FLAG

AT GERMAN EMBASSY

Police Stand At Attention While National Anthem Is Sung.

By Telegram to The Freeman.

Washington, Feb. 6.—Refusal of the German government to put its embassy flag here at half staff in honor of Woodrow Wilson resulted in a demonstration in front of the embassy building early today and the calling out of police reserves.

Just before dawn nearly 150 taxi drivers, including many ex-service men, assembled at the German embassy, at Massachusetts avenue, and planted a pole in the front lawn, with an American flag at half mast. Ambassador Otto Weidfeldt and his staff first became aware of the demonstration when a pistol shot, fired by some one in the crowd, awakened them.

Peering from the front windows they saw the crowd milling around in the avenue, and immediately telephoned for the police.

When the reserves arrived in patrol wagons and automobiles, 100 assembled taxi drivers began singing "The Star Spangled Banner."

The policemen all stood at attention and when the singing was over, ordered the taxi drivers to disperse. They did so, leaving the flag, which was later removed by the police. No arrests were made.

"We intended no harm to the embassy or its officials," said one taxi man. "We only wanted to show them how to properly honor a citizen of the United States."

Announcement was made at the embassy this morning that the flag would be half masted at 12:30 p. m. when all government departments close in accordance with the executive order of President Coolidge.

Dr. Thayer at School No. 7

Gives Illustrated Explanation of Napanoch Institution—Mental Defectives Can Be Trained to Usefulness.

In spite of the inclemency of the weather Tuesday evening many people availed themselves of the opportunity of hearing Dr. Thayer, superintendent of the Napanoch Reformatory, lecture at School No. 7.

Dr. Thayer began his talk by explaining that the Napanoch Institution was founded originally for a state prison and later given over to a reformatory for which it was used until about three years ago. Since that time it has been used as an institution for defective delinquents, mental defectives of criminal traits or habits.

Dr. Thayer showed lantern slides of the different buildings and explained the various trades learned by the inmates of the Napanoch institution but dealt principally upon the mental defective child and the remedy.

A mental defective child is one who has an arrested development, said Dr. Thayer, and the factors entering into the mental defect are heredity, disease, or injury to the head or brain in infancy. Mental deficiency cannot be cured. This does not mean that they cannot be trained, as there are an infinite number of operations and activities at all levels of intelligence and training can be continued successfully just so long as we do not endeavor to teach matter or things of a grade too high for the mentality involved. In plain words, we should not try to make a scholar of material, which would make a fairly good carpenter.

Dr. Thayer suggested early recognition in these cases and the supply of proper training and environment, lest they become a social problem. He recommended the intelligence tests in the public schools and special ungraded classes with industrial training. Determine the limit of abstract education possible, and when that limit is reached, substitute some line of training which will be within the boy's possibilities and so fit him for the station in life for which he is mentally equipped. Make his training interesting to him and you will do away with the temptation of truancy which is, after all, but a natural defense reaction against an impossible task.

Dr. Thayer closed his talk with a poem, "The Fence or the Ambulance."

Quiet Jockeying in Oil Scandal

By Telegram to The Freeman.
Washington, Feb. 6.—Despite the cessation of official activities because of the funeral of ex-President Wilson, the senate's oil investigation gained increased momentum today that may lead to new explosions involving additional high federal officials in the naval reserve leasing scandal.

Fight on Prosecutors.

Ever since the announcement by the White House of appointment of Silas H. Strawn and Atlee Pomerene as special counsel to prosecute the oil cases, a fight of intensive proportions has been smoldering in the senate over the selections. Open warfare is expected the moment the president forwards the names to the capitol for confirmation by the upper chamber, possibly tomorrow or late this week.

Opposition to Strawn and Pomerene is not confined to partisan lines, certain factions of both the Republicans and Democratic ranks being prepared to join in the onslaught.

Strawn's appointment is known to have incurred the ill feeling of the so-called insurgent Republican group because of his alleged connection with "big business." Senator La Follette, Republican, Wisconsin, leader of this group, and his lieutenant, Senator Norris, Republican, Nebraska, are said to be ready to head the onslaught, at least to the extent of bitter verbal attacks.

Democrats "Slighted."

In high Democratic ranks there was no concealing of resentment at the choice of Pomerene, especially with the manner of his selection by the White House. This faction charged that President Coolidge did not call in minority chiefs to suggest names for the Democratic counsel, but that after the selection was made Senators Robinson, Democrat, Arkansas, leader, and Walsh, Democrat, Montana, chief assailant of the leases, were summoned to the White House for consultation.

Democrats feel that they have been "slighted" by the president, when the proper thing to have done was to have picked the counsel from a list of names advanced by Robinson and Walsh. It is known that Pomerene's name was not on the list Walsh presented after the appointment had been determined upon.

Insurgents have a further score against Pomerene in that he voted for the Esch-Cummins railroad law. Whether the opposition will block confirmation or even delay it, is conjectural. Despite the antagonism there is a feeling that the appointments should be approved speedily so that injunction suits to prevent E. L. Doherty and Harry F. Sinclair from further extracting oil from the reserves may be sought expeditiously. Operations are continuing unchecked at present in Elk Hills and Teapot Dome.

Coolidge Orders Speed.

As a further incentive to confirmation, it was learned at the White House that President Coolidge has ordered that injunction proceedings be filed as soon as possible after senatorial approval of the appointments. The counsel are said to have already prepared the necessary preliminary steps.

During the fall following the death of Mr. Wilson, committee members have been busy developing new leads in the investigation. These have to do chiefly with alleged stock deals connecting senators, representatives and other high governmental officials. Walsh has spent many hours closeted at home working secretly on new evidence. He already has issued subpoenas for a host of brokers and bank officials.

The row stirred up between followers of William Gibbs McAdoo, and Senator Reed, Democrat, Missouri, as a result of Reed's demand that Doherty be questioned about payment of money to ex-cabinet officers grows more bitter today. McAdoo's friends countered with the charge that Reed himself was not free from connection with oil interests. They alleged that the Missouri senator represented the Universal Oil Products Company in litigation against the Standard Oil of Indiana.

Though not summoned, at least two of the men mentioned by Doherty as having received money from him in payment for professional services are expected to take the stand within a few days. They are McAdoo, and George Creel, director of the bureau of public information during the war.

New York, Feb. 6.—Damage estimated at $100,000 was caused by a fire today which swept the three upper floors of a six story loft building at numbers 372 and 374 Broome street. The blaze, the smokiest in months, caused much excitement in the lower East Side.

One fireman, Edward J. Walsh, was slightly injured.

Bury Luby Tomorrow.

By Telegram to The Freeman.

New York, Feb. 6.—Frank Luby, amateur boxer who died on Sunday as a result of injuries sustained in a bout with Frank Sweeney, will be buried tomorrow from his home in Brooklyn. Luby died from the effects of a fractured skull.

Yes, Rather.

Two fashionable women were recently calling on a new neighbor, and while awaiting her appearance, a little girl came into the room, evidently bent upon the rescue of a doll recently abandoned there. Naturally she was viewed with some curiosity, and one of the callers, secure in the child's obviously tender age, spelled a low-voiced comment: "Not very pre-etty." To her horror, the small maiden paused on the threshold, and, fixing a contemptuous eye upon the culprit, remarked with lofty composure: "No, not very pre-etty but rather s-m-a-t."

Three Pots of Kobangs.

The Marubachi family of Tokyo, who operated a drug house of old established fame, had received and transmitted from generation to generation a sealed instrument, with instructions that it should be opened only if the family house fell into straitened circumstances. The packet was rescued during the earthquake and it was found to contain instructions to dig at a certain place. Three earthenware pots of kobangs—oval shaped gold coins of feudal days—were found, valued at several hundred thousand yen.

Natural Levees.

A levee is an embankment which keeps a river in its channel. A river like the Mississippi carries a great amount of sediment from its swift headwaters to the lower ground. When its velocity is checked, it drops a portion of this sediment, gradually raising the bed of the stream above the surrounding country. In flood time, the river overflows its banks, depositing sediment along the land side of the banks. This creates a long alluvial ridge, which is called a natural levee.

Insects and Fish Give Shocks.

None of the mammals, birds, or reptiles have the power to discharge electrical current, but there are several species of insects and fish thus endowed. The electric eel is one of the best known of the "living batteries." It inhabits the lakes and rivers of Brazil and the Guianas. It sometimes attains a length of eight feet with a girth equal to that of a man's thigh. The electric organs are situated in the tail and are composed of numerous cells containing jellylike substances.

Called Ump a Shirker

A young lady at Navin field last summer said to her escort: "Why doesn't that other man catch some of the balls? It isn't fair to let the little fellow catch them all."

"What do you mean?" asked her escort. "I don't understand you."

"Why I mean," said this fair young thing, "that big man in the blue uniform with the big life-saving apparatus in front of him. Why doesn't he do his share of the work?"

"Oh, that is the umpire," answered her escort. "He isn't supposed to catch the ball."

"Well, I don't care, it isn't fair and he is much bigger and not nearly so nice looking."

GUERRIERI INDICTMENT DISMISSED IN GREENE

The February term of the Supreme Court for Greene County was called to order by Justice Ellis J. Staley at Catskill Monday afternoon promptly at two o'clock.

District Attorney Charles G. Coffin arose and addressed the court. He said that Emil J. Guerrieri was killed on August 18, 1918. He died of strychnine poisoning, alleged to have been contained in a bottle of root beer given him by his daughter, Gladys, while he was at work in a hay loft. A preliminary hearing was held, but not sufficient evidence was developed to warrant the defendant being held. Gladys Guerrieri was eight years old, and the facts did not in any way connect her with the death of her father. No indictment was found until the November term of the court in 1922 when defendant was indicted on the testimony of her daughter and appeared in court and pleaded not guilty through her counsel, Senator Ryne.

The District Attorney stated that he afterwards talked with Gladys Guerrieri and that she repudiated her testimony given before the grand jury, and insisted that her mother did not have anything to do with the poisoning of her father. This made Gladys' testimony absolutely valueless to the prosecution. In view of the conditions, the District Attorney said he assumed the responsibility of asking the court to dismiss the indictment and discharge the defendant.

The court said that in view of the conditions as stated by the District Attorney, it seemed proper to grant the motion and it was so ordered.

Senator Bryne, counsel for Mrs. Guerrieri, arose and stated that Gladys had been detained at a hotel in Albany since her mother was indicted in November, 1922, and asked that she now be discharged from such restraint.

The court so ordered.

Yonkers Outfit Here Tonight

Frank Morgenweck's combination will tonight take on the Yonkers team of the Metropolitan League. Both teams are very anxious to win this contest as each one from now out means much towards the winning of the much coveted flag for second half honors.

Starting the game for the local quintet will in all probability be Campbell and C. Husta in front with Powers at center and McNichol and Artus in back. If Anderson is on deck he may get into the contest. This coterie will give the fast traveling Yonkers outfit a fine struggle. With Stretch McMan at the pivot position, the Yonkers team has been greatly strengthened. In the forward positions will be seen Marron and White and in the backfield Wassmer and Garland.

American League Needs Pitchers

Every Club But Yankees Weak In Hurling Department, Says Barrow. Which Makes Yanks Look Like 1924 Champions.

By Davis J. Walsh.

By Telegraph to The Freeman.
New York, Feb. 6.—No deal got beyond the rumor stage of extreme adolescence at the American League schedule meeting in Boston owing to the fact that seven clubs in an eight club circuit are seeking one and the same thing, viz, to wit and namely: "Pitchers."

This was the opinion expressed today by Edward G. Barrow, business manager of the New York Yankees, upon his return from the scene of activity, if any. Edwards can take a philosophic view of the situation. He happens to be hooked up with the only club in the league that is immune from the great drought, responsible for turning the American League into a one-team proposition.

"Intra-league deals have come to nothing for the past year or so because every manager, except Huggins, is after pitchers," Barrow said. "There can be no basis arrived at for a trade as long as every man is after the same thing. They have even tried to get some of our pitchers away from us but Huggins knows he is sitting pretty and has no intention of breaking up an all-star staff. It looks as though the situation will remain as it is in the American League until a flock of young pitchers is developed."

A glance over the seven remaining clubs in the league serves to confirm Barrow's analysis. The Detroit Tigers claim they would run one-two this season if they could fall heir to a real second baseman. They might have been able to get Dykes from Connie Mack if it wasn't for the fact that the latter is hot after pitchers and the Tigers have none to spare; in fact, are just a bit inadequate in this respect.

The Athletics, as stated, are sitting tight behind their lineup except that Mack wants at least one more capable pitcher. Tris Speaker, out in Cleveland, could stand three or more and would not countenance a deal that did not include a first class hurler or so. The Senators also figure they would finish in the first division with a couple of fetching young men to help Walter Johnson; the Browns, provided Sisler returns to the game, would be real contenders with a fair staff of men grouped around Urban Shocker, and the White Sox, in addition to needing a shortstop, must get more pitching strength if they hope to figure at all.

It was the collapse of their staff that ruined the Sox last year and nothing has been done about it in the meantime. And, according to Barrow, nothing can be done about it since nearly every club seeks exactly what the Sox are seeking. Even the Red Sox claim to be more or less satisfied with their present array.

Good One on McCoy

Kid McCoy, one of the famous stars of the ring, was in a fanning bee in Los Angeles with Cliff Jordan, former boxer, now the traffic officer at Second and Broadway, New York, at the Vernon coliseum.

An elderly man in the crowd brought up the Ed Dunkhorst-McCoy fight held years ago. McCoy fanned with the man for a few minutes and, turning to Cliff Jordan, said:

"Cliff, I want you to meet an old friend of mine from New York state."

Turning to the middle-aged man he said:

"Cliff Jordan is one of the best boys ever developed on the coast."

The two solemnly shook hands—and then some one snickered.

McCoy had introduced Cliff Jordan to his father, Pat Jordan.

SEES NEED OF CODE FOR YOUNG PLAYERS

Daly Works Out Grid Rules for Boys Under Fifteen.

Believing that the modern game of football as played in the universities has certain characteristics that make it an admirable game for the youth of the nation provided some of the elements of danger are taken out of it, Maj. Charles D. Daly, former coach of the Army eleven, has worked out a set of rules for boys under ten and another for boys between the ages of ten and fifteen. Those codes were presented at the time of the N. C. A. A. meeting with the recommendation that they be inserted in the intercollegiate rule books, but no action was taken.

"Almost everywhere you go in the fall," said Major Daly, "you see youngsters handling a football. The desire to emulate their 'big brothers' is everywhere evident and I believe that the modified code of rules, which would give the smaller and younger boys a game which is adapted to their needs and which will safeguard them against injuries which young boys are subjected to if they play the intercollegiate game without the protection afforded the intercollegiate players."

"For boys between ten and fifteen I would suggest that in order to eliminate tackling a rule be provided whereby a player carrying the ball can cry 'hold' and the play cease, the situation being the same as if the referee had blown his whistle.

"For boys under ten I would advise that the game be made a kicking and passing game only, and that tackling, throwing and interference be prohibited. Also that running with the ball be prohibited. All kicks and passes should be heeded. I would suggest that there be a formation similar to the usual scrimmage formation and that from this the ball be either thrown or kicked forward to a player on the same side, who must hold the ball in order for his side to retain the ground gained.
